

Winter is Here!

Fall Updates By Finch

There have been lots of new and exciting changes at Pathfinder Ranch this fall! We've updated and revamped our astronomy program to include brand new activities. We just finished posting our new glow-in-the-dark planet models around Lied Lake. The planets are made to scale, based on differences in size. It's like you're actually travelling through the solar system! We also have our new astronomy dome, which is equipped with a projector that displays the night sky right above you. We have a lot in store for the astronomy program and we're so excited to share it with you! In other news, our wrinkly tortoise friend, Artimus, has finally gone into brumation. Brumation is when a reptile adapts its body to help it survive very cold weather, similar to when a bear goes into hibernation. We're so excited to say "Hello!" to Art again when he wakes up in the spring! We're also very close to finishing construction on our main road that was damaged last winter. The expected completion time is January. Thank you so much to those who donated to our February storm damage fund! If you're interested in learning more about this project or other opportunities to support us, you can visit pathfinderranch.com/donate.

The Buzz on Bee Boxes By Kite

One in every four bites of our food is thanks to pollination by bees! This makes bee protection urgent, especially amid the threats of climate change and intensive agriculture. Our new bee box, located in Pathfinder Ranch's organic garden, makes a great teaching tool to inform students about the connections between pollinators, food, and the specific farming practices we can use to promote the health of all involved. Despite our bee box lacking any current residents, we still record observations of wild pollinators using iPads equipped with Citizen Science applications and discuss their biology using other educational tools. In this way, students absorb information about the ecological significance of bees while also engaging in hands-on learning activities that contribute to local pollinator research projects.

Riverside Botanic Garden By Sequoia

Do you ever feel the need to stop and smell the flowers? If so, then the Botanical Garden at University of California- Riverside, is the perfect place for you to visit. This beautiful garden has plants that grow in not only your backyard, but also around the world.

Park hours are daily from 8:00am-5:00pm. For a suggested donation of $5 per person, you could spend quality time with your loved ones seeing native pollinators happily visiting their favorite flowers in the butterfly or rose garden. The park also offers a chance to see exotic plants from places like Australia, South Africa and the Redwood forests of Northern California/Oregon. The park has around 1.5 miles of trail to explore and the turtle pond is a great place to have a picnic.

Spending the day with your favorite people immersed in nature is just a bus or short car ride away.
